

Placing Commas in Sentences

Someone has stolen all the commas!

Write out these sentences and put the commas in the right place.

1. The cat who had brown and ginger speckled fur was curled up on the soft fluffy rug.
2. “After a while” admitted Jane “you’ll learn to like the food that you think is awful.
3. Michelle flicked back her shiny golden hair and then applied eye shadow mascara and lip gloss.
4. Jemima picked the small delicate daisy and placed it carefully in her coat pocket.
5. The picture which was sitting on the shelf next to the television was very eye-catching.
6. Jamal strolled down the road to the shop and bought bread cakes almonds and some apples.
7. Alicia pursed her plump red lips and then replied “I don’t usually work Fridays.”
8. The old fragile lady who was struggling to hobble down the steps suddenly fell.
9. “Just get me some pears crisps lettuce and tomatoes please” said Martyn.
10. Mary examined the torn tattered sofa and started cutting the new fabric.

Placing Commas in Sentences

Someone has stolen all the commas!

Write out these sentences and put the commas in the right place.

1. The cat, who had brown and ginger speckled fur, was curled up on the soft, fluffy rug.
2. "After a while," admitted Jane, "you'll learn to like the food that you think is awful."
3. Michelle flicked back her shiny, golden hair and then applied eye shadow, mascara and lip gloss.
4. Jemima picked the small, delicate daisy and placed it carefully in her coat pocket.
5. The picture, which was sitting on the shelf next to the television, was very eye-catching.
6. Jamal strolled down the road to the shop and bought bread, cakes, almonds and some apples.
7. Alicia pursed her plump, red lips and then replied, "I don't usually work Fridays."
8. The old, fragile lady, who was struggling to hobble down the steps, suddenly fell.
9. "Just get me some pears, crisps, lettuce and tomatoes please," said Martyn.
10. Mary examined the torn, tattered sofa and started cutting the new fabric.