

Placing Commas in Sentences

Someone has stolen all the commas!

Write out these sentences and put the commas in the right place.

1. “Go to the bathroom Georgia and get me some toilet paper” said Mum.
2. Mysteriously the purple silk cushion which had sequins sewn along the edges had disappeared from Eleanor’s bed.
3. Shivering with fear Bert reached for the rusty door handle and turned it ever so gently hoping not to make a sound.
4. After much deliberation Matt approached Shanice who had only recently moved to the area and asked her if she would like to go for a drink.
5. “It really is up to you Mandy” blurted Gary in an unfriendly manner.
6. Unfortunately Mr Hussain had narrowly missed his doctor’s appointment due to a delayed bus which he was furious about despite getting up 15 minutes earlier than usual.
7. Once more the doorbell rang loudly so Mrs Peters hurried quickly to the door as this time she was sure that it must be her friend Dorothy.
8. Harry dug away at the heavy clumps of soil and threw them carelessly over his shoulder not realising that he was filling a hole that he had dug previously.
9. The sun was shining brightly in the sky like a giant disco ball glittering on the dance floor that was the beach filled to the brim with holiday makers.
10. Fumbling for the television remote James leaned over the arm of the couch and to his surprise it collapsed and sent him flying onto the floor landing in a heap just by the window.

Placing Commas in Sentences

Someone has stolen all the commas!

Write out these sentences and put the commas in the right place.

1. "Go to the bathroom, Georgia, and get me some toilet paper," said Mum.
2. Mysteriously, the purple, silk cushion, which had sequins sewn along the edges, had disappeared from Eleanor's bed.
3. Shivering with fear, Bert reached for the rusty door handle and turned it, ever so gently, hoping not to make a sound.
4. After much deliberation, Matt approached Shanice, who had only recently moved to the area, and asked her if she would like to go for a drink.
5. "It really is up to you, Mandy," blurted Gary, in an unfriendly manner.
6. Unfortunately, Mr Hussain had narrowly missed his doctor's appointment due to a delayed bus, which he was furious about, despite getting up 15 minutes earlier than usual.
7. Once more the doorbell rang loudly, so Mrs Peters hurried quickly to the door as this time she was sure that it must be her friend, Dorothy.
8. Harry dug away at the heavy clumps of soil and threw them carelessly over his shoulder, not realising that he was filling a hole that he had dug previously.
9. The sun was shining brightly in the sky, like a giant disco ball, glittering on the dance floor that was the beach, filled to the brim with holiday makers.
10. Fumbling for the television remote, James leaned over the arm of the couch, and to his surprise, it collapsed and sent him flying onto the floor, landing in a heap just by the window.